

Derivative free nonsmooth optimization algorithm for large data clustering

S. Banimehri*, A. Malek

Department of Mathematics, Tarbiat Modares University, Tehran , 14117-13116, Iran

*S.banimehri@modares.ac.ir

Abstract : The minimum clustering problem for large data sets is formulated as a problem of nonsmooth, nonconvex optimization problem[1]. An algorithm for solving this problem is proposed by using diagonal discrete gradient bundle techniques[2]. Numerical simulation show the efficiency of the current novel algorithm.

Keywords: cluster analysis; derivative free; nondifferentiable; nonsmooth optimization

References

- [1] Adil M. Bagirov, John Yearwood, "A new nonsmooth optimization algorithm for minimum sum-of-squares clustering problems," European Journal of Operational Research., 170 (2006) 578–596.
- [2] N. Karmita, "Diagonal discrete gradient bundle method for derivative free nonsmooth optimization ," A Journal of Mathematical Programming and Operations Research., 65(8) 1599-1614.